EXTOL AFFILIATES

Growth systems for B2B companies

What we have built, what happened next, and how our systems work.

PREPARED FOR DAVID SAMUEL · OCTOBER 2026 · CONFIDENTIAL

WHO WE ARE

Extol Affiliates was founded by Devasya Dwivedi and Anshul Mikita Prajapati. We build growth systems for B2B experts and firms: AI agents we built ourselves do the daily work, and people check and approve every piece before it goes out.

Our aim is simple. We make experts the name buyers think of first.

WHAT IS IN THIS DOCUMENT

Page 2-4
What happened after we started, the clients we work with and what we learnt.

Page 5-8
Our systems, one by one: what each is, why we use it and how it runs.

Page 9-10
How a client works with us, what to expect, and what comes next.

From our own page to three clients

We did not start by selling. We built the system, ran it on Extol first, and let the results bring the first clients in.

01 We built the system on ourselves
Before we offered anything, we built our own AI agents for LinkedIn, content and outreach, and ran them on Extol's own accounts.

02 Our own page started bringing in clients
When Extol's LinkedIn page reached about 50 followers, new clients started coming to us. That was the first proof the method works.

03 Three clients in three very different markets
3D Images AI (3D product models for Amazon sellers), Bloggerly (SEO articles for businesses) and a finance and SAP consultancy, which is under NDA.

04 A plan the day after the first call
For the consultancy, we delivered a full growth plan the day after our first conversation, built on a detailed audit of their LinkedIn.

05 We studied what actually works
We built Taste, a library of more than 200 proven posts, reels and websites, each broken down into why it works and when to use it.

06 We researched and wrote targeted outbound
We researched UK firms such as independent estate agents and financial advisers one by one, and wrote outreach around something real about each firm.

07 Now: bringing in people who know the market
The system works. The next step is the right introductions, which is why we are talking to advisers like David.

Three clients, three markets, one method

Each client is in a different market, but the method underneath is the same: find what makes the expert worth hearing, then put it in front of the right buyers again and again.

3D IMAGES AI · PUBLIC

3D product models for Amazon sellers

What we did: built outreach to more than 2,100 Amazon brand owners.

Why: brand owners are a clear, reachable market with a visible need for better product images.

BLOGGERLY · PUBLIC

SEO articles for businesses

What we did: ran a LinkedIn campaign for the brand.

Result so far: leads are now asking for calls.

CONSULTANCY · UNDER NDA

Finance and SAP advice

What we did: a full LinkedIn audit and a complete growth plan, delivered the day after the first call.

Their name stays private.

What these clients taught us

- Experts are busy doing the work. Marketing always comes last, so it has to run without them.
- Referrals are not a plan. When new work only comes from referrals, growth cannot be planned or predicted.
- Generic AI content is ignored. Buyers scroll past posts and messages that could have been written by anyone.
- Real stories win. Posts and messages built on real people and real work get far more attention than generic advice.

Our own proof came first: when Extol's LinkedIn page reached about 50 followers, new clients started coming to us. We now do the same for experts who are far better known in their field than we were.

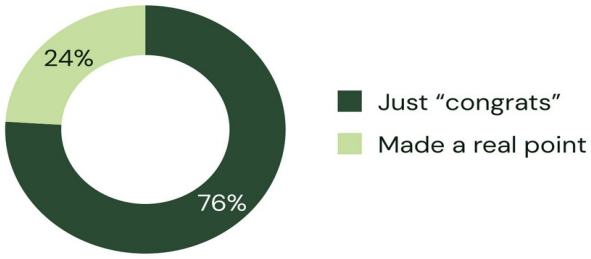

Buyers don’t know great experts exist

A real audit from October 2026 shows the problem clearly. The client was a former Big Four partner, with 1,597 LinkedIn followers and about 9 reactions per post.

AVERAGE REACTIONS PER POST

WHAT THE COMMENTS SAID

Source: Extol LinkedIn audit, October 2026 (client name kept private)

What the numbers say

- Real stories get about 6 times more attention. Posts with named people got 69 reactions on average. Framework posts got 11.
- Most engagement is polite, not interested. 76% of comments just said “congrats”. Only 24% made a real point.
- The expertise is there. It simply is not reaching the people who would buy it.

Why this happens to almost every expert

Experts spend their time on client work, so their profile, posts and follow-ups get whatever time is left over, which is usually none. When they do post, it is often a framework or general advice, because it feels safer. Buyers do not remember frameworks. They remember people, opinions and stories.

Our job is to close that gap: turn what the expert already knows into a steady stream of real, specific content and conversations, without taking up their week.

Position the client as a thoughtful leader

Thought leadership is the strategy. Every channel and every system serves it. The goal is not to make the client an influencer. It is to make them a voice buyers trust.

THE IDEA	THE VOICE	THE PROOF
One clear point of view that people remember and repeat. Every post leans on it.	Weekly posts that take a side, written in the client's own voice and from their own notes.	Client stories, named only with permission, seen in feeds, inboxes, webinars and communities.

The system has six parts, and we run all of them

01	LinkedIn, run by agents	Profile, posts, comments, connections and follow-ups.	Page 6
02	One idea, every platform	X, Instagram, Threads, Substack and YouTube, each in its own format.	Page 7
03	Taste system	Every piece matched to a proven reference before it goes out.	Page 7
04	Webinars and clips	A monthly live session that turns followers into conversations.	Page 8
05	Skool community	A waitlist, cohorts and a self-paced membership.	Page 8
06	Website, search and tracking	One place to land, articles that rank, and a live dashboard.	Page 8

Agents do the repetitive work at a human pace. People decide what goes out. Nothing is ever published without the client's yes.

LinkedIn, run by agents from end to end

LinkedIn is where most B2B buyers check out an expert before they reply. So it is the first system we set up, and the one that runs every day.

What it is

A set of AI agents that look after the client's whole LinkedIn presence: the profile, the weekly posts, thoughtful comments on the right people's posts, new connection requests and every follow-up message. The agents draft; the client approves.

Why we do it

Consistency wins on LinkedIn, and consistency is exactly what busy experts cannot give. Agents never forget a follow-up and never skip a week, while the client keeps full control of what is said in their name.

How it runs, step by step

01 Set up the profile
We rewrite the headline, about section and featured items around the client's one clear idea.

02 Find the right people
Agents build a list of the buyers and peers the client should be talking to, and engage with their posts first.

03 Connect at a human pace
About 5 connection requests a day at the start, rising to 20. That stays well under LinkedIn's limits.

04 Post and comment every week
Posts are drafted from the client's weekly note, in their voice, and checked against Taste.

05 Follow up every conversation
Every reply gets a timely, personal follow-up, so no warm lead goes cold.

WHAT THE CLIENT DOES

About 10 minutes a day approving drafts on their phone: yes, edit or bin.

WHAT THE CLIENT NEVER DOES

Write from scratch, chase connections, or try to remember who to follow up.

One idea, published everywhere buyers look

Buyers don't all live on LinkedIn. One note from the client becomes a set of pieces, each made for its platform.

LinkedIn	X	Instagram	Threads	Substack	YouTube

- Each platform gets its own version, never a copy-paste: a thread on X, a carousel on Instagram, a short take on Threads, a longer essay on Substack and short clips on YouTube.
- Substack builds an audience the client owns. If a platform changes its rules, the newsletter list stays with the client.
- Write once, be seen in six places. The client's 30-minute note does the work of a full content team.

The Taste system: why our work does not look like AI

Taste is Extol's creative-direction library, curated by our team. It holds more than 200 proven posts, reels and websites, each one studied and broken down: why it works, who it works for, and when to use it.

MATCH

One reference per piece

Before anything is made, it is matched to the single reference that fits it best.

APPLY

Borrow the craft

We use the structure, pacing, type and layout that made the reference work.

NEVER COPY

The client stays the client

Their assets stay theirs. Colours, voice and opinions are always the client's own.

This is the difference buyers notice: content that feels considered and human, built on what has already been proven to hold attention.

Webinars and community turn followers into clients

Posts earn attention. Live sessions and a community turn that attention into real conversations and long-term trust.

Webinars: the expert, solving real problems live

Once a month, the client runs a live session. In buyer sessions, prospects bring a real problem and the expert solves it on the spot, which shows the expertise far better than any post. Community sessions build the wider audience.

- Every attendee is followed up personally within 48 hours.
- Every session is cut into short clips for every platform, so one hour becomes a month of posts.

Skool: a home for the client's community

Skool is a community platform where the client's followers can gather, learn and stay close. It moves people from followers to members, and from members to clients.

01 Waitlist
Interested people join a list, so demand is visible before anything launches.

02 Free taster
A free session or short course lets people experience the client's thinking first-hand.

03 Cohorts and membership
Paid group cohorts and a self-paced membership. Agents handle sign-ups, reminders and admin.

Website, search and tracking

- One place to land. A clean website that tells buyers who the client helps and how to start a conversation.
- Articles that rank. Search-focused articles, built with the same method we use for Bloggerly, bring in buyers who are already looking.
- A live dashboard. Every channel is tracked in one place, and we review what is working with the client every month.

2½ hours a week from the client

The most common worry we hear is “I don’t have time.” The system is designed around that. Writing disappears from the client’s week; thinking, deciding and one conversation with us remain.

CLIENT TIME PER WEEK

01 Raw note
A voice note or a few lines, once a week.

02 Agents draft
Posts, clips and messages in the client’s voice.

03 Client approves
Yes, edit or bin, on their phone.

04 We publish and track
Everywhere, at a human pace.

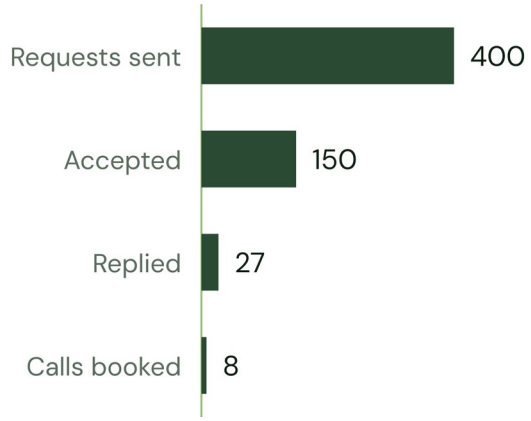

The first 90 days

DAYS 1-30	DAYS 31-60	DAYS 61-90
Voice interview, profile rewrite, website and the agents set up. First posts go live.	Every platform running, first webinar, outreach at full pace. Day-60 results review.	Skool community opens, clips flowing, and we double down on what the numbers show works.

Our promise: at day 60 we review the results together. If we are behind plan, we fix it in writing, or the client can leave.

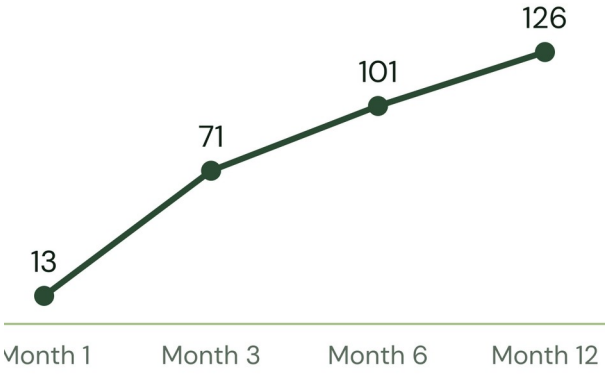

Results that build month by month

ONE MONTH OF OUTREACH (ESTIMATE)

Planning estimates, not yet proven results

QUALIFIED LEADS PER MONTH (FORECAST)

Forecast from our consultancy plan, not yet proven

At full pace: 20 connection requests a day, about 37% accepted, 18% of those reply and 30% of replies book a call. By month 6 the plan aims for around 100 qualified leads a month, 10 real sales calls and 2–3 new clients. A qualified lead replies, books or signs up; likes don't count. Large contracts can take 6–12 months to close.

Where we are honest about our gaps

- We do not yet have a case study with hard numbers. The first ones are being built now.
- We work across very different markets and need to choose one to own first.
- Two founders currently lead both sales and delivery.

Where David fits

ADVISE	GUIDE	CONNECT
Sharpen our offer and pitch. Sit in on key pitches and debrief us.	Help us choose the one market to own first, and the proof your network trusts.	Introduce us to experts and firms who need this, and join first calls where your name helps.

You know the people. We build the system.